

BILL A. RODERICK

Deputy Inspector General

Environmental Protection Agency

Bill A. Roderick was named Deputy Inspector General of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on November 11, 2005. Before joining EPA, he was the Assistant Auditor General for Manpower and Reserve Affairs Audits at the Department of the Navy, where he received the Superior Civilian Service Award in 2002 and 2005. Mr. Roderick is a Certified Public Accountant in Virginia, a Certified Information Systems Auditor, a Certified Fraud Examiner, and a member of the AICPA and the Association of Fraud Examiners.

Mr. Roderick's career as a professional auditor began in 1972 with Arthur Young and Company, CPA's. He began his government career in 1974 with the U.S. Army Audit Agency, St. Louis. In 1976, he transferred to the Defense Audit Service, and later moved to the European Field Office in Stuttgart, Germany. In 1983, he returned to the Headquarters of the U.S. Department of Defense Inspector General in Washington, DC. In 1988, he became the Director of the Southeast Region of the Naval Audit Service in Virginia Beach. In 1995, Mr. Roderick was promoted into the Department of the Navy's Senior Executive Service as Director of the Eastern Area Office, Naval Audit Service. In 2000, he transferred back to Washington, DC, to become the Assistant Auditor General for Manpower and Reserve Affairs Audits.

Mr. Roderick earned a Bachelor of Science Degree in Accounting from Missouri State University in 1972. He earned a Masters Degree in Business Administration from the University of Missouri in 1979.

Mr. Roderick resides in Fairfax, Virginia, with his wife, Lynne, and daughters Allison, Lindsey, and Katherine.